Konstanta u umjetnosti Valentine Šuljić čvrsta je i dinamizirana linija. Transformira se ona u njezinim već znanim radovima – monotypijama, uvijek u neki začudni splet apstraktnih mrlja i crtovlja, u kojem nema naznaka momezisa. Ima međutim asocijaciju na kružna gibanja i na prostorne probije, na dinamiku kretanja i na energetska prahnjenja, a što se sve može iščitati (i) kao prikaz internog autoričinog mikro-univerzuma, koji bilježi njezine misli i impresije, osjećanja i nervne vibracije. Pritom se taj mikro-univerzum, lakin preskokom kroz prostor i vrijeme, istodobno doživljava i kao makro-univerzum, jer ga nije teško zamisliti kao čudesnu presliku misterija života u bezgraničnim prostranstvima svemira.

Možda baš zbog želje da se dobije dojam stalnih i nepredvidivih mijena, stalnih preskakivanja iz stvarnosti u zbilju i stalnih pulsacija linije u prostoru, Valentina Šuljić je prije nekoliko godina u svojim radovima počela koristiti transparentne podloge (staklo i od najnovijeg vremena najlon), koje nameću drukčije vizualne dijaloge. Jer zbog prozračnosti i vječne naklonjenosti svjetlu, prostorno-vremenska dimenzija tu postaje odmah drukčija, bez obzira na to što je linijski kompozicijski raster u Valentine strogog artikuliran i discipliniran. Kad se njezina linija kreće tim prostorom, ona u njemu stvara gibanje i energiju. S druge strane, upravo zbog transparentnosti podloge gubi se osjećaj zbiljnosti, a prevladava imaginarnost. Dojam je kao da se linijski spletovi šire i kovitljaju u nekim drugim dimenzijama, izvan realne percepcije. Zato je sve tu nekako „taktilno sklisko“ i balansira na rubovima opipljivoga i neopipljivoga, dok se opažaj neosjetno, ali kontinuirano transformira: prvo u promatračevu oku, a onda u njegovu duhu, redefinirajući osjet i stvarajući od vida privid, te naposljetku jednu novu – presloženu stvarnost.

Kad je Valentina Šuljić odabrala staklo („lamistal“) kao podlogu svojih monotypija, izazvala je odmah u grafičkim krugovima nedoumice: - O čemu se tu radi? O matricama, otiscima, crtežima, ili jednostavno oslikanim površinama? Poznato je da se monotypije mogu raditi na podlozi od metala, pleksiglasa, stakla ili linoleuma, uljenom bojom i slikarskim alatom (baš kako to radi i Valentine), a onda se, pomoću valjka (ili prešom) s na taj način pripremljene matrice otiskuje samo jedan jedini originalni otisak - monotypija. Valentine ipak sa svojih „staklenih matrica“ ne radi otiske, već ostavlja da one funkcioniraju kao jedan jedini postojeći original. Pritup joj se pritom može nazvati slikarsko-grafičkim, a za „utiskivanje“ na podlogu profinjenih linijskih struktura i njihovih tekstura služi se jednostavnim valjkom. Tu međutim nije kraj priči, jer njezina istraživanja idu dalje, pa u idućem koraku autorica „staklene monotypije“ združuje s drugim medijima i likovnim kategorijama - sa svjetлом i prostorom, aktivirajući i usmjeravajući percepciju na nov i drukčiji način. Činjenica je, međutim, da je onaj početni perceptivni pomak tu učinilo staklo. Jer zbog svojih specifičnih karakteristika ono nas već u samom startu uvodi u svjetove u kojima vladaju suprotstavljeni polariteti: opipljivo/neopipljivo, stvarno/nestvarno, materijalizirano/de-materijalizirano... Staklo se odlikuje čvrstoćom (ali i krhkošću), prozirnošću i rezonantnošću, te izuzetnom glatkoćom i sjajem, a rado prigrluje – i snažno reflektira, svjetlo. Valentinine linijske strukture gibaju se unutar staklenih, prozračnih, transparentnih i prosvijetljenih prostora po nekim drugim zakonitostima, na svom putu modificirajući i sebe i svoj okolni prostor. Čineći se jednom stvarnim, a drugi put imaginarnim; jednom podložnim opipu, a drugi put se gotovo rasplinjujući. Uslojavanjem staklenih podloga i njihovom transformacijom u objekt, odnosno prelaskom iz dvodimenzionalnosti u trodimenzionalnost, ove strukture i mrlje naizgled prelaze iz iluzije u zbilju. Ali ta zbilja, zbog specifičnosti medija stakla i posebnosti svjetla ostaje iluzija i onda kad se misli da je prostor oslojen. Jer staklo i svjetlo, pogotovo kad su zajedno, vole prevariti našu percepciju, pa često u njihovim svjetovima i ono što možemo opipati izmiče opipu. Zato i spletovi linija Valentininih monotypija, bilo da su još na zidu, ili su se već zaputili u prostor, uvijek daju efekt svojevrsnih „opipljivih neopipljivosti“ i neočekivanih privida, unatoč tome što se, sljubljeni s koloritom promišljenoga i efektnoga crno-crvenoga dvoglasja, temelje na discipliniranom vizualnom poretku i čvrstoj kompoziciji.

Ova izložba na neki način sublimira Valentinina dosadašnja istraživanja okrenuta suvremenom pristupu monotypiji i „monotypijskim postupcima“ na transparentnim podlogama. Izložba isto tako zaokružuje ciklus s tematikom linije/niti. Tu temu i taj motiv Valentina Šuljić istražuje već duže vrijeme, a prijenos „niti“ u medij „staklenih monotypija“ profilirao je autorsku samosvojnost njezina stvaralaštva, davši mu oznaku prepoznatljivosti. Do sada je Valentine svakim svojim novim istupom dokazivala kako se na ovom području uvijek ima što za reći, suočavajući nas stalno s nečim novim: s dodavanjem novih medija onima otprije prisutnima i novih prostornih i vremenskih dimenzija onima otprije poznatima. Tako nas na neki način čini svjedocima – ali i sudionicima gradnje svoga vizualnog sustava. Mi smo to i na ovoj izložbi: svjedočeći onome što se rezimira i sudjelujući u onome što dolazi novo. Ono što se tu rezimira/konstatira je da je linija i dalje u centru interesa, te da se percipira kroz njezin odnos prema staklu, prema svjetlu i prema prostoru. A ono što je novo su Valentinini radovi u kojima se propituje odnos linije prema formi: prema kompaktnoj konstrukciji (objektu) i prema dekonstrukciji (instalacija - krhotine).

Iščitavanje djela Valentine Šuljić svojevrsna je pustolovina. Pu-stolovina koja naliči na neko imaginarno putovanje na koje je potrebno sa sobom ponijeti dovoljno koncentracije – ali i imaginacije; promišljenosti – ali i spoznaje; intuicije – ali i dozu poetike.

MOTION IN IMAGINARY SPACES

A constant feature of the art of Valentina Šuljić is a firm and yet dynamic line. It is transformed in her earlier works, her monotypes, always in a remarkable complex of abstract blotches and groupings of lines, in which there is not an inkling of mimesis. There are, however, associations with circular moment and spatial breaches, dynamics of movement and discharges of energy, all of which may (also) be read as a depiction of the artist's internal micro-universe, recording her thoughts and impressions, feelings and neural vibrations. And yet, this micro-universe, through a quick jump through time and space, is simultaneously perceived as the macro-universe, for it is not difficult to imagine it as a wondrous simulacrum of the mystery of life in the limitless expanses of space.

Perhaps this is a result of the desire for the attainment of an impression of constant and yet unpredictable changes, of incessant jumps from actuality into the reality and constant pulsations of the line in space. Several years ago Valentina Šuljić started to use transparent supports in her pieces (glass, and more recently, plastic), which necessarily entail a different kind of visual dialogue. Because of the transparency and the greater predisposition to light, the space-time dimension here becomes at once different, irrespective of the strictly articulated and disciplined linear composition grid that Valentina applies in her work. When her line moves along this space, it creates within it both movement and energy. On the other hand, precisely because of the transparency of the support, the feeling of reality is lost, and the imaginary takes the upper hand. The impression is of the lineate sets expanding and swirling in some other dimensions, beyond real perception. For this reason, everything here is in a sense tactiley slippery, is balancing between the palpable and the impalpable, while observation is imperceptibly but yet constantly transformed; first in the observer's eye, and then in their spirit, thereby redefining the feeling and creating an illusion of the seen, which is finally permuted into a new reset reality.

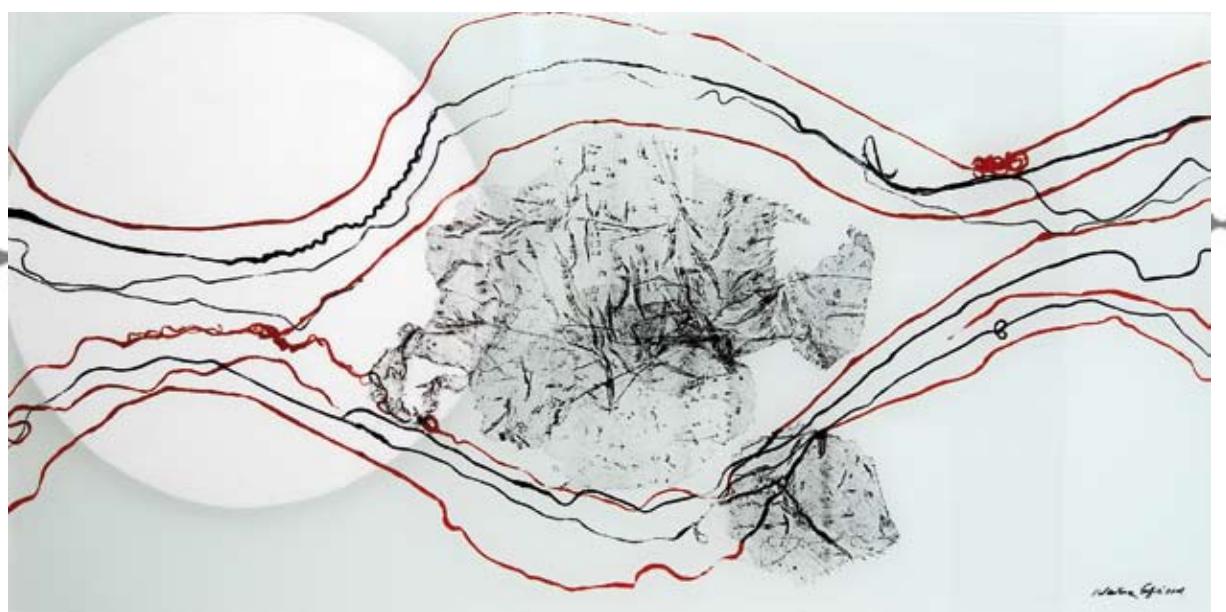

When Valentina Šuljić chose glass (lamistal) as the support for her monotypes, she at once created quandaries in graphic art circles. What is this about? About plates, drawings, or simply painted surfaces? Monotypes, it is well known, can be made on a support of metal, Perspex, glass or lino, in oils and with painter's tools (as Valentina does) and then, with a roller or a press, one unique impression is taken from the plate so prepared. This is called the monotype. And yet Valentina does not make impressions from her glass plates, rather leaving them to act as the one and only existing original. Her approach can be called painting/graphic art, while for the "imprinting" on a background of refined lineate structures and textures, she makes use of a simple roller. But this is not the end of the story for her research does not stop here, and the artist's next step is to combine these glass monotypes with other media and art categories, with light and space, activating and channelling the act of perception in a new and different direction. The fact is, however, that this initial perceptive shift has been made by the glass. Because of its specific characteristics, from the very start it takes us into worlds in which opposed polarities reign: the palpable and the impalpable, the real and the unreal, the materialised and the dematerialised.

Glass is characterised by strength and brittleness, transparency and resonance, and outstanding smoothness and shine, and will happily take in and strongly reflect the light. Valentina's lineate structures move within the glass, transparent and lit spaces according to some other laws, modifying as they go both themselves and the surrounding space. At times they seem real, at others imaginary; obedient to the touch, yet practically evanescent. The layering of the glass supports and their transformation into an object, that is, the move from two-dimensionality into three-dimensionality, allows these structures and blotches, seemingly at least, to move from illusion into reality. But this reality, because of the particular nature of the glass medium and the special quality of light, remains an illusion even when space is thought to have been won over. For glass and light, particularly when they are together, like to cheat our perception, and often in their worlds, even what we can indeed touch is tactually evasive. And thus the complexes of lines in Valentina's monotypes, whether they are still on the wall or have already set off into space, always give an effect of being, as it were, tangible intangibles and unexpected illusions, although, combined with the colouring of a well-thought-out and effective two-part harmony of black and red, they are based on a disciplined visual system and a firm composition.

In some sense, this exhibition sublimates Valentina's previous research, which addressed the contemporary approach to the monotype and to monotype procedures on transparent supports. The exhibition thus rounds off a cycle to the theme of lines and fibres or threads. Valentina Šuljić has been exploring this topic for a good length of time already, and the transfer of threads into the medium of glass monotypes has set a stamp on her work, making it original and independent, giving it a mark of identifiability. To date, in every new appearance before the public Valentina has shown that in this area she always has something new to say, constantly confronting us with something different, with the addition of new media to those already in place, and of new spatial and temporal dimensions to those long-since known. Thus, in some way she turns us into witnesses of and participants in the construction of her visual system. That is what we are at this exhibition. We witness and take part in the summation and in the new. What is summed up is that the line is still at the centre of her interests, and that she is seen through her attitude to glass, to light and space. What is new here is the works in which she re-examines the relation between line and form – line and compact construction (object) and line and deconstruction (installation and fragments).

Responding to the works of Valentina Šuljić is a kind of adventure. An adventure that is like an imaginary journey on which all one has to do is take sufficient concentration, but also imagination; deliberation and cognition; intuition but also a draught of poetry.
